Building cooperation

Dear reader,

Welcome to the first issue of our revamped newsletter designed to bring you the best of the latest news from and about FEHRL. In this edition, we focus on some of the activities in which FEHRL is involved during the coming months. These include two key events that coincide with the European Commission's European Mobility Week from 16th-22nd September 2012.

Launch of European Transport Research Alliance

On 20th September 2012, FEHRL is organising the official launch reception in Brussels of the European Transport Research Alliance (ETRA) for partners of the DETRA project, selected potential ETRA partners and other key stakeholders. This reception will include presentations by Dr. András Siegler, Director of the EC's DG Research & Innovation Directorate H - Transport and FEHRL President Joris Al. It will also be an opportunity to say farewell to Jean-Pierre Médevielle, the driving force behind the original Lyon Declaration process, who retires in October 2012. For more details on this event, contact Isabelle Lucchini at isabelle.lucchini@fehrl.org.

FEHRL is the Coordinator of the strategic FP7 DETRA (Developing the European Transport Research Alliance) project to analyse the state of the European Research Area (ERA) development within the transport domain. More information on this project can be found at http://detra.fehrl.org.

INCRIS Project Management training in Kiev

European cooperation has always been wider than the EU itself. One of the aims of the INCRIS project is to strengthen the ability of Ukrainian researchers to take part in European research. To this end, FEHRL is working with its member Shulgin State Road Research Institute (DNDI) to organise a Project Management training in Kiev, Ukraine from 18-20th September 2012.

Click here for more information, including details on the second module organised by FEHRL and linked to the FEHRL International Project Management training course to be held in Brussels on 14-16th November 2012.
